

Hello everyone, I am from Kayseri, Turkey. I used to study at Erciyes University in Turkey, at the philological faculty, at the department of Russian language and literature.

I have chosen Mogilev State A. Kuleshov University in order to get a master's degree in Philology.

Before enrolling here, I have contacted many universities in Belarus, found out the conditions of study and the cost, but this university most prompt and attentive to all my questions, besides, I could always ask my questions via SKYPE, which is very fast and convenient. It was also very important that the duration of the master's degree is only 1 year. I found out about the university from the Internet, and then it turned out that one of my friends had already graduated from Mogilev State A. Kuleshov University and his advice became the decisive one for me.

The education system in Turkey and in Belarus is different. In my opinion, the main difference between studying at home and in Belarus is the attention of teachers. Here, teachers are more interested in students and are always ready to help them. I'm very I liked the culture of Belarus and the Belarusian people. I visited all the regional cities of Belarus except Brest and saw many sights, such as Grodno, Khatyn, Mir Castle, Minsk, Vitebsk, Gomel. Of course, there were difficulties. It was very difficult to get used to the cold weather, Belarusian cuisine, which is fundamentally different from Turkish cuisine, and prepare for exams and diploma defense.

In the future, I plan to continue my postgraduate studies in Turkey. What I also liked is that Mogilev is quiet and proud, there are fewer foreign students here than, for example, in Minsk or Grodno, which means you will have more opportunities to practice Russian. I also noticed that here foreign students live together with Belarusians in the same dormitory, and not like in other cities – only foreigners live in one dormitory, and only Belarusians live in the other. And the cost of education is much lower than in Minsk, which is a very big plus.

And of course, it should be noted that Mogilev State A. Kuleshov University provides really high-quality education.
